Week 2: Learning Styles Video

After reading about learning styles, I started to think about how I actually learn best. The article made me realize it's not as simple as just being a "visual learner" or an "auditory learner." Most of the time, I use a mix of the different ways to understand something.

For example, I like seeing examples or pictures, but I don't really understand it until I try it out myself. That shows me that I don't just learn in one way. I think a lot of people are probably the same, they need more than one method depending on what they're learning.

Rather than forcing yourself into one type of learning, it's better to be flexible and use whatever method works best at the time.
